

Audio visual drugs a reality

Hollywood and areas like that produce countless movies of all kinds. The bottom line is: more antisocial behavior, more violence, more disasters, more destruction, and so forth.

Why?

Well, we live in a era of snacks. Emotional snacks. Eat it quick and get saturated quickly without too much effort.

A lot of things have reached the level of superlatives. You know, those softy romantic love stories of decades ago just don't fit anymore in today's world of extremes. Everything has to be hard porn, brute violence, death kill, blood and broken bones, stunts beyond belief, dark language, speed and force, noise and barbarism and what have you.

Just to get a brainial rush for a little while. Most people get addicted to it. They want every time more.

But that "more" of that "rush" is, in fact, a drug. Here we are not talking about entertainment but about audio visual drugs. Yes, they ARE drugs. A drug is defined as "a substance that alters mental or physical behavior beyond the point of control with the purpose to get the impression that things go better". A drug is not necessarily a chemical compound. I don't care what wikipedia says about it. I even did not take the trouble to check on that site.

And that is exactly what is happening in the cinema, in front of the TV or the computer screen. Audio visual drugs. Who can live without audio visual entertainment?

So what do those drugs do or cause?

First of all, they open the mind, due of the emotional flavors. Then, once the mind is open, they show the mind how to do certain things, such as how to fuck, how to kill, how to talk to your neighbor, how to divorce, how to destroy, how to react, etc. So it is an educational process. More and more movies also carry subliminals, so the subconscious mind gets "programmed" as well. Not many people are aware of this abusive technology of Hollywood studios.

It seems that our emotional inside is surrounded by a thick skin. It looks like the soul has become tougher. In other words, we have lost the ability to feel tiny nuances of the heart. It seems that only the strongest impulses get through. But worst of all is that we live with the false assumption that we have become stronger, just because of the stronger impulses that we can handle. But nothing is farther from the truth.

What we assume is an illusion, nothing more than that. We have become weaker. Proof? When it comes to real feelings, such as in a real love affair, most people are absolutely unable to cope with this. They need mental help instead. And there are all sorts of examples. Today, there is way more work than the grand total of all therapists can handle. Check the stats.

So, on one side, mankind has become the "tough" Earthling. But on the other side, mankind is more dependant on mental help. A contradiction? It does not really matter.

The mental processor is disrupted by the input overload. So it doesn't know anymore how to handle reality. As with all drugs ...

The importance is that people should be aware of the kind of input they are accepting. The old computer formula "bad input - bad output" applies to the human being as well. No matter how well the input gets processed.
