

Common forms of mind control

For many decades, many countries including the US would somewhat and somehow experiment on their own population including (mainly) their own military personnel. One good example (out of thousands) happened in the early 1980s. The secret government had the bucolic farming community of Sutcliffe located somewhere in mid-western United States based on a movie called Impulse.

The secret government would had the towns drinking water contaminated with some classified chemicals which caused its population to lose their inhibitions. In another words, they cannot control their impulses. It is as if that the people have been taken over by their basic impulses and that all their learned behavior and socialization has been forgotten rendering them as lusty animals of superior intelligence. The populations' EGOS AND SUPEREGO (in Freudian terms) have been obliterated and the impulsive, satisfaction seeking, pleasure driven ID takes over completely.

Men and women stripped down to what we really are like without all the socialization and education, and after all HUMAN BEINGS ARE BASICALLY ANIMALS BLESSED WITH A SLIGHTLY MORE DEVELOPED BRAIN and most important of all, our instincts are the same as those of animals! Sex conquers all (depending upon which environments), but at the end, the population itself got wiped out. Even in the movie "Jacob's Ladder", about a Vietnam veteran who suffers from the belated impact of government sanctioned LSD experiments. The movie moves in time and space between Vietnam and New York with hallucinatory force that started happening on the Mekong Delta, Vietnam during October 6, 1971.

That movie is partially true which did not fully explain enough about the experimentation of captured POWs of both Viet Congs and NVA (North Vietnamese Army). What the movie did not tell you (or did not know about) in which even the director who directed the movie had his life threatened if he went too deep (so he made many parts up), in which those captured Vietnamese prisoners were given massive doses of LSD (and/or with other biological forms of chemicals) to study their behaviour patterns.

The US military brass was shocked with intrigue when they saw those prisoners would go after each other like insane animals, and when they are locked up in solitary confinements, those drugs would induce the prisoner's minds to envisage what they see of their own body as foreign (for example an arm), they would savagely masticate with their teeth while the other arm is trying to rip it off. No matter what they see on their own body, they would try to rip it out by any possible means. The scientists were somewhat shocked but cannot believe their eyes that humans are capable of doing those such things.

The scientist and psychologist of all levels relating to their expertise found out that the Vietnamese has certain disciplinary traits just like the Americans (due to French influence in one century), and to a certain extent can be lulled by underhanded methods, because of massive wide experimentations (like agent orange, DDT which is a powerful insecticide effective on contact with other classified chemicals of biological nature embedded inside the bombs (on a nano based technology which could cause anywhere from mild to severe psychosis), dropped by B52's on almost the whole damn country! And yes, disinformation is so prevalent that the majority of the conspiracy theories that you see on the internet, majority of them is written by the CIA, NSA, DIA, FBI, and other cover intelligence agencies, SO WATCH OUT!
